

Colleen Cain

Bio:

Colleen is a first year graduate student. She is from Pittsburgh and thinks it is unfortunate that people in Florida cannot have basements. Ideally, she would fill her days travelling and writing poetry. But in all practicality, those are only hobbies. She is committed to changing the world, while the world is changing her.

Research Interests and Areas of Specialization:

Race and ethnicity, gender, inequality, social theory

Education:

B.A. John Carroll University, 2004

Current Research:

“Common Ground: Poetry’s Implications for a United Latina Feminist Identity”

Professional Activities, Honors, and Awards:

Teaching Assistantship, Department of Sociology, UF
Enhancement Award, Department of Sociology, UF
